The presentation was given by Isby Fleischmann (PlaceWorks), C.C. LaGrange (PlaceWorks), and Boykin Witherspoon (CSUSB). Because the community is fairly knowledgeable about water issues (as communicated during the Agua Dulce event as well as via WaterWorks 37's experience in the community), the majority of the presentation focused on funding opportunities for water projects. This included WaterTalks funding as well as other potential funding sources.

The meeting was attended by two anonymous community members who did not offer any questions or comments. The meeting was recorded so that it could be posted and watched by community members at any point. In the days following the meeting, we learned that large portions of the community were affected by a preventative power outage due to the extreme fire danger posed by the weather in the community that day. We sent a link to the meeting recording to Jackie Ayer (Acton Town Council) and encouraged Jackie to share the link with community members who were not able to attend the event.

The event was advertised on the WaterTalks website, with a full page advertisement in the Country Journal (delivered to 5,000 households in the area), and via email to Jackie Ayers (Acton Town Council).
