Description:

TRUST South LA hosted a Halloween art showcase for local youth - we asked them to design their perfect neighborhood and provided them with an art set to get them started. The virtual showcase included a gallery presentation on their pieces for youth and their parents, where TRUST staff pointed out the common themes of housing, green space, public transport. Many of the children included amenities like public pools, fountains at parks, ponds, and other water-related projects in their perfect neighborhoods. We used these art pieces to transition into a listening session, where we went over the WaterTalks project and presentation, and then posed some survey questions to the audience, both the children and their parents.
